Go from Home to Meet People.
A postcard received from Paris a few days ago, says the New York Tribune, bears a picture of the Hotel de Ville and the Pont d'Arcole and this message: "I have been here an hour at a time for three days, but never saw a soul I knew—no met-by-chance adventure." In the summer of 1905 the man who sent the card was also in Paris, and one day, when near the entrance to the Hotel de Ville, he saw a child stumble and fall. He hastened to pick the little boy up, but before he could do so another man rushed from an opposite direction and performed the service. The child had sustained a slight bruise. The man who had picked him up tried to soothe him and said: "You are all right; don't cry." The other man asked: "Is he hurt?" This was all in English. After mutual introductions it was discovered that both men lived in the same block in New York and had never met before. The next day the story was told at the office of John K. Gowdy, who was then the American consul general, and it became a stock yarn, the moral of which was: "If you want to meet people walk on the Pont d' Arcole."

SATO LA MARINA BLOTTED OUT.
Tidal Wave Literally Destroys Mexican Town Near Tampico.

Mexico City, Sept. 7.—Word was received here tonight that the destruction of Soto La Marina, a town in the state of Tamaulipas, was so complete that the whole place has completely disappeared, with the exception of a few church towers that seem to project from the surface of the sea. The tidal wave which destroyed the place has almost obliterated the spot on which it stood. No one has been able to get closer than a league from where the port once stood. From this point rescue parties have discovered tents on the side of a small hill, the only evidence of life left.

A Mexican Herald special from Tampico says that the steamer Sonora left that port this afternoon for the neighborhood of Soto La Marina.

The town is on a river, some miles inland, but was in the direct path of the terrible gulf storm, which swept inland almost at this spot, and traveled westward, carrying death and destruction in its wake.

A trial sack of Spotless will make you a life-time customer.
